

Tom O'Connor

Is an adviser in retail banking with the Irish Banking Federation. As well as dealing with mortgage data and publications, this role involves representing the banking industry on other areas of regulation and legislation such as mortgage arrears, anti-money laundering, consumer protection, customer mobility and financial inclusion.

He is also Chairman of the European Mortgage Federation's (EMF) Statistics Committee which is responsible for the EMF's statistical publications and studies.

Tom is a graduate of Trinity College Dublin, having read History and Political Science. He also holds a Masters in Development Studies from the University of Manchester.